THIS PAPER may be found on file at the Postoffice, where it is open to the inspection of all persons.

THE Chicago Justice who ordered the arrest of the peddlers of reprint of the Pall Mall Gazette's chapter of masthead showed a proper appreciation of the subject when he said: "However necessary the publication of this thing was in England, there is no excuse for its circulation in this country." The necessity for cleaning out a London cesspool does not afford a reason for thrusting the filth under the nostrils of decent people on this side of the ocean.

As will be seen in another column, the old hero General U. S. Grant is dead. While we write it is hard to believe that such is the case, for to him we owe our prosperity and the union of the country. Through him the United States has had honors heaped upon her greater than any country in the world, and the old hero went down to his grave with the knowledge that he had more distinction as a representative man than any man living. In the months of his sickness he has shown the same bravery that he did on the battle-field. Grim death had no terrors for him. He was honored up to the time of his death by the world, and more especially by the men he fought against during the civil war; for have we not seen by the dispatches almost every day where ex-confederate officers have called upon him and extended their sympathies, have not all the associations of the south and north extended their condolence. Prayers for his recovery have went up from every church and of every denomination throughout the length and breadth of this broad land for his recovery, but it was not to be—Gen. Grant is dead. To-day the nation mourns for the greatest man in the history of the world. Another jewel has been added to our diadem of great men who have gone, and 50,000,000 of people are shedding a silent tear for him who was with us but yesterday, and now is but a piece of lifeless clay. But in time to come his name will be revered by our children even more than we revered him in life. Peace to his ashes.

Burned to Death.

DUQUOIN, ILL., July 22.

A most deplorable accident happened in this city this evening, the result of using coal oil to build fires with. It seems that the two children of a Mrs. Langsdon, sister of Dr. A. Tetrick, aged respectively 2 and 6 years, were left alone in their home, the mother being at a neighbor's. About 6:30 the eldest of the boys tried to start a fire in the kitchen stove, and use a can of oil for the purpose. The flames from the fire ignited the oil, which exploded with a loud noise, setting fire to the children's clothing. The larger one immediately rushed from the house when he was at once discovered by a neighbor and his clothing extinguished. His burns, while very severe, will not prove fatal. The little one, being too young to run out of the house, was burned from head to foot, and inhaled the flames. Kind friends and neighbors at once gave valuable assistance to the suffering of the little ones. The mother, as soon as she was made aware of the horrible calamity, immediately went into a deathlike swoon, from which she was not aroused for hours. The youngest child can not live, its sufferings being terrible. The oldest one will, by faithful nursing, recover. The mother has the sincerest sympathy of the whole community, she being dependent on her daily labor for subsistence. The house was not damaged, although an alarm of fire was turned on.

A Missplaced Switch.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 21.

The train from Atlantic City leaves at 6:45 a. m. over the West Jersey Railroad. It is a fast express, making no stops between Atlantic City and Camden, and its schedule time is eighty-nine minutes. The train left on time this morning, drawn by engine 603, in charge of Engineer George Murphy and Fireman John McConrick. It was made up of a parlor car and five passenger coaches, well filled with passengers, mostly business men who travel back and forth almost daily. While running at a rapid rate of speed at Franklinville, a station twenty-five miles from Camden, the engine ran into a siding, through a misplaced switch and crashed into a line of loaded freight cars. The first car struck was loaded with lumber, and boards and splinter beams were jammed into the engine in a confused mass. The engine was thrown from the track, and the parlor car and two others coaches were derailed. McConrick jumped as soon as he was in danger and escaped unhurt. Engineer Murphy, however, stuck to his post. He put on the air brakes and did all in his power to avert the collision. He was taken from the wreck in an unconscious and dying condition. The passengers crawled through the doors and windows of the wrecked cars. Several were bruised and all badly frightened, but no one was seriously injured, thanks to the self-sacrificing devotion of Engineer Murphy. Fireman McConrick says that when Murphy saw the collision was inevitable, he shouted, "Jump for your life, Jack! I'll stay, if I die for it!" Murphy leaves a wife and one child, for whom the grateful passenger on the wrecked train have raised a handsome sum of money. It is not known whether the switch was left open carelessly by some of the railroad men when they side-track the freight cars or was opened with the intention of wrecking the train.

Fourth-Class Postmasters.

WASHINGTON, July 22.

The colored messenger who used to tote Assistant Postmaster Gen. Hay to and from his carriage was asked to-day if Mr. Stevenson required any such mail stamp.

"Ah, boss, no sah," he said with a grin. "He steps 'round like a 3-year-old Kiltuck thoroughbred, sah; he do for a fat, sah. He's got life into him."

Mr. Stevenson's list of fourth-class Postmasters to-day includes the following:
